MSSBT Sep-26 Forecast: 51 Inclusions and 13 Deletions

YTD Southbound flows remain meaningful with one of the highest daily average net inflows in history. Backed by MSSBT's strong historical hit ratio and proforma performance, we forecast 51 inclusions and 13 deletions for the September 2026 review with implementation details and key dates to watch.

MSSBT was launched in Aug 2025, forecasting Southbound stock inclusions through its bi-annual review cycle. It was later upgraded to MSSBT V2 in February 2026, by incorporating the deletion forecasts as well, aiming to capture alpha-generating opportunities from both legs. So far, the framework has (>=95%) hit ratio of forecasts for inclusion and deletions. In the September 2025 review cycle, MSSBT identified 19 of 20 actual inclusion candidates. In March 2026, the model captured 41 of 42 actual inclusions, and 24 of 25 deletion candidates.

Proforma performance indicates strong absolute return as well as alpha generation (>15% absolute, ~20% relative to HSI): The September 2025 inclusion list generated 21% absolute returns and 19% relative returns vs. the Hang Seng Index. Moreover, the leg of deletion forecasts in our strategy serves as a great supplementary and complementary component to our strategy, helping offset the broader market beta effect. The March 2026 inclusion list delivered a 1% proforma absolute return amid more lackluster market conditions. However, its 5% proforma relative return suggests our strategy has the potential to outperform the index regardless of market conditions, as the Mar 2026 deletion leg generated 16% proforma absolute returns and 20% proforma relative returns. We continue to believe that investors can maximize their returns by implementing both the inclusion and deletion legs of our strategy ahead of Southbound eligibility reviews.

Southbound inflows YTD remain a crucial liquidity source for HK despite moderation vs. 2025. With average daily inflows of US$388mn (total net YTD inflows of US$35bn), 2026 is among the highest in Stock Connect's 13-year history, behind only 2025 and 2024, which were largely on par with 2020.

For the September 2026 review, we forecast 51 Southbound inclusion candidates (across 9 sectors), and 13 deletion candidates (across 5 sectors). Information Technology (15 stocks), Health Care (13 stocks), as well as Industrials (12 stocks) account for 78% of our of forecast inclusions, reflecting continued strength in new-economy sectors and ongoing innovation-driven industry development.

Implementation & Key dates

How to implement our MSSBT strategy: Build both inclusion and deletion positions on an equal-weight basis on 7 Aug-26 (approximately 30 days prior of the inclusion/deletion taking effect) and hold until 7 Sep-26 to maximize returns from the Southbound adjustment trade.

Key dates to monitor:

- Late Aug-26: Expected announcement of Hang Seng Composite Index (main benchmark index for Southbound adjustments) review results.
- 4 Sep-26 (First Friday in September after close): Expected announcement of official Southbound inclusion/deletion lists.
- 7 Sep-26 (Second Monday in September): Southbound adjustment becomes effective.

MSSBT Proforma Track Record Recap: High Hit Ratios with Significant Alpha Generation

Two editions published so far (Aug 25 & Feb 26). We launched our MSSBT (Morgan Stanley South Bound Trading Strategy) in August 2025, the framework was designed to replicate the official Southbound eligibility criteria and identify potential inclusion candidates ahead of regular review announcements. The strategy was motivated by our finding that historically newly included Southbound stocks generated 3.7% absolute returns and 5.2% alpha versus the Hang Seng Index on average during the 30 days prior to inclusion. In February 2026, we altered the model to MSSBT V2, which also incorporated Southbound deletion forecasts. The enhancement was supported by our analysis of 285 deletion events in 2020-25, which showed that deleted stocks declined by 11% on average during the 30 days prior to deletion.

Historically strong hit ratio record of (>=95%) since launch. In the September 2025 inclusion cycle, MSSBT identified 19 potential candidates, all of which were eventually included, capturing 95% of the actual inclusion list and achieving a 100% forecast-to-inclusion conversion rate. In March 2026, the model captured 41 of 42 actual inclusions, implying a 98% hit ratio, while also identifying 24 of 25 deletion candidates (96% hit ratio).

Proforma performance indicates strong absolute return as well as alpha generation:

The September 2025 inclusion list delivered 21% proforma absolute return and 19% proforma relative return (vs. Hang Seng index). By comparison, absolute return from the March 2026 inclusion list was more muted, generating 1% proforma absolute return, which was related to lackluster market conditions. In our view, the weaker inclusion performance in the March 2026 cycle was more due to the overall weak equity market environment - with Middle East tensions leading to a significant global risk unwinding and acute liquidity tightness, which tends to affect Hong Kong disproportionately as its currency is pegged to the USD and there are few capital flow controls in the Hong Kong market. However, our strategy's stronger proforma relative return (5%) in 30 days prior to the effective date indicates that it has the potential to outperform the index despite market conditions.

As a supplementary and complementary strategy, the introduction of the deletion forecasts into our MSSBT strategy has helped offset unexpected and unfavorable market conditions - the March 2026 deletion leg generated 16% absolute proforma returns and 20% proforma relative returns, lifting the combined MSSBT V2 strategy's total proforma performance to more than 20% relative to the Hang Seng Index.

We believe this outcome supports our February 2026 enhancement of MSSBT through integrating the deletion forecasts as an essential component of our strategy, allowing investors to capture alpha opportunities from both sides of the Southbound eligibility review process.

YTD Southbound flows have moderated, but remain supportive and meaningful

Southbound inflows have moderated from last year's record pace but remain supportive. Net inflows have reached US$35bn YTD, with average daily inflows of US $388mn – roughly half the pace recorded over the same period in 2025. Despite this reduced momentum, 2026 YTD daily average of net Southbound inflows is among the highest in Stock Connect's 13-year history, behind only 2025 and 2024, which were largely on par with 2020.

We have observed much stronger momentum of Southbound flows since June, which has helped stabilize the Hong Kong market's overall liquidity situation. As we highlighted recently, continued Southbound inflows have been a key driver of Hong Kong equities' recent outperformance versus regional and global peers, providing a steady source of liquidity amid weakening global risk appetite. ([China Market-Wise: China Outperforming in a Volatile Market – What's Next? \[9 Jul 2026\]](#)). Such inflow momentum, if sustained through August and September, would also help support the inclusion/addition leg of our MSSBT strategy in the upcoming September 2026 review cycle.

Southbound Inclusion and Deletion Forecast for September 2026 Review Cycle

51 stocks forecast as inclusion candidates

Our proprietary forecast model has been developed to predict the list of Hong Kong stocks that are most likely to be confirmed for Southbound trading. This time we have identified 51 Hong Kong listed stocks from 9 different sectors as eligible for SB inclusion, and should be eligible for Southbound trading starting from September 2026 (Exhibit 8). Our model shows that Information Technology (15 stocks) and Health Care (13 stocks), as well as Industrials (12 stocks) account for the largest number of possible inclusions for the September 2026 review cycle, representing 29%, 25%, 24% of the eligible universe, respectively. This highlights the continued strength of new-economy sectors and ongoing innovation-led industry upgrading. (Exhibit 6).

Key watch points and trading timeline

- Late August 2026: Hang Seng Index Company is expected to announce the results of the August 2026 Hang Seng Composite Index review, which serves as the key input for the subsequent Southbound eligibility adjustment.
- 4 September 2026 (first Friday in September, after market close): HKEX is expected to announce the official Southbound inclusion and deletion lists following the regular review.
- 7 September 2026 (second Monday in September): The Southbound adjustment is expected to become effective.
- Strategy implementation: Consistent with our previous Southbound trading strategy, we recommend investors establish both inclusion and deletion positions one month ahead of implementation (7 August 2026) and hold them until the effective date (7 September 2026), when positions are exited.
- Investment rationale: Historical back-testing suggests that the majority of excess returns from Southbound eligibility changes are typically realized during the month preceding the effective date, supporting early positioning ahead of the official implementation.
